Gunstock Wind Farm The Gunstock Wind Farm in the town of Sandown, New Hampshire, United States, is a wind farm consisting of 61 fixed-base drilling units owned by Providence Power, a subsidiary of Northeast Utilities. Construction began in October 2009 and it opened to the public in December 2011.

Description The Gunstock Wind Farm consists of 61 MPGE (million pound force feet) Siemens wind turbines. The top three blades are labeled, but the turbine's height cannot be discerned. The turbines have a rotor diameter of 120 meters (390 feet) and a maximum rotor speed of 48 m/s (151 ft/s). They are designed for year-round electricity generation. With a total capacity of 720 MWe, they are the largest wind turbine farm of its kind in the United States. Government opposition and opposition from environmentalists The project was opposed by the town of Sandown, which filed suit in June 2009 against the developer, claiming the turbines were built too high and too close to homes and the town's coastal area. Construction of the wind farm began in 2009, and it was completed in December 2011.

Despite opposition from the town and environmentalists who claim the turbines will pose

While most people still turn to physical, tangible printed documents for documentation or illustrations, these methods of communication and execution are quickly being eroded by digital tools and processes. However, with paperless office solutions, you can still maintain a hefty paper backup for yourself or your business. Why Paperless is the Best? The benefits of paperless are obvious; it's an eco-friendly, green way of operating, saving tons of ink, paper and supplies, as well as water. It is also more efficient, easier to use, and a more secure way to communicate. Due to these inherent qualities, paperless office solutions can benefit any business. How to Paperless? There are as many paperless solutions for your business as there are ways to secure your data. Modern paperless office solutions will fulfill all your business needs, allowing you to create, manage, store and print documents, contracts and invoices, as well as produce and manage your company's data. Are You Ready to Start a Paperless Office? Sure you are. It may seem like a daunting task at first, but implementing a paperless workflow comes with inherent benefits that will boost your company's bottom line. Choosing a Paperless Solution Most paperless office solutions for your business are cloud-based. However, they can come in the form of a hosted service or as an offline program. When choosing a paperless solution, be aware that security and personal information are
