A new family of oxo-carbon species is presented that are structurally and electronically related to but distinct from classical oxo-carbon species. With its high affinity for the coordinatively unsaturated transition metal centers found in osmium complexes and its ability to undergo a series of unique transformations, this family of species also serves as a new and versatile ligand for computational and experimental studies. William Colquhoun (author) William Colquhoun (1762-1830) was a Scottish lawyer who became a historian of the Roman Catholic Church. He wrote in defence of Catholicism, notably on behalf of Pope Pius VII. He was the last and longest-serving President of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith in Scotland. Life He was born at Cambuskeith, near Stirling, on 12 January 1762, the son of Colonel William Colquhoun of the Scots Greys. His early education was in the parish school of Cambuskeith. He was then sent to the University of Edinburgh, where he matriculated on 15 June
