The ability to add images to notes is a welcomed addition to this feature-rich note-taking application. The most significant new feature for Evernote 5 is its ability to display photos, and it includes a number of templates that are designed to make this functionality easy. Photo Viewer Unlike a lot of note-taking applications, Evernote 5 doesn't include a full-fledged image editor. In other words, the only way to add images to notes is by using Evernote's built-in image viewer. The program displays both JPEG and PNG files, as well as BMP and TIF files, and lets you adjust a number of parameters, such as brightness and contrast, resize them and crop them to fit specific margins. However, you'll have to manually import them into Evernote using the File menu or drag and drop them into a new note. This functionality works even when you're offline, and you can view and adjust the size and aspect ratio of images at any time. Aside from this, you can also export images in various formats, including PDF, JPG and PNG, and you can share them on social networking sites. The Evernote website claims that this feature will be available in an upcoming version of the service, but it has not yet been released.

Photo Screenshot Viewer The Photo Viewer and Photo Screenshot Viewer modules are Evernote's way of taking a picture of something and automatically adding it to a note, as well as displaying a full-screen preview of the image. The program uses the screen's composite video output, and it can take up to 3 shots at a time. These can be saved in various formats, including JPEG, PNG, JPG, GIF and TIF, and they can be viewed using the default image viewer or exported directly to your clipboard. The best part about this feature is that you can resize photos and crop them to specific margins. Similarly to the built-in image viewer, this functionality works even when you're offline, and you can view and adjust the size and aspect ratio of the images at any time. Evernote Web Clipper When you open a link in a browser, Evernote Web Clipper will capture the page's HTML, CSS and JavaScript code, as well as its related images, CSS, JavaScript, XML, JSON and other files. The
